Automated data extraction

Companies operate on a floating platform of contracts, legal and compliance documentation. Why floating? Because the information locked within, and about, those documents is typically held in an unstructured or semi-unstructured form. Transforming the data into useful business insights cannot be done at speed and scale without the use of Artificial Intelligence (AI) and the power of Automated Extraction (AE) that it brings.

However, the challenge of transforming mission critical documents into actionable data cannot rely on AI solutions alone. From our many years of experience in DMA, we have learned that while AI offers dramatic advancements in the accuracy and speed of data extraction, the tools still require human input, quality validation, training and support by professionals with the right expertise. Our DMA solution brings together a deep understanding of the technology alongside the skills and resourcing that will deliver success.

Using artificial intelligence applications from leading technology companies, Integreon deploys expert teams to manage the extraction and reporting process efficiently for a wide range of digital transformation projects—from M&A due diligence to massive remediation programs for contract estates that need to be updated, harmonized or consolidated as a result of corporate restructuring or specific regulatory change events. These case studies are available here.

Organize, comply, enhance

- Integreon DMA brings control, visibility and value to the corporate estate of legal documents:
- Offline contracts are digitized and brought online into an organized structure
- Key data are extracted for analysis—metadata (information about the contracts, deleting redundancy), important clauses, obligations, service level commitments, pricing information etc.
- Contracts can be classified and sifted for ease of access and multiple commercial perspectives
- Contracts transparency will drive legal risk and compliance management initiatives
- Estate defects become easy to fix, tackling duplication, outdated information, unsigned documents and lack of harmonization

Dedicated expertise

Integreon DMA is available to support standalone legal optimization projects and rolling transformation programs, whether for individual business units or across the enterprise. With a global delivery center infrastructure, our support teams offer expertise balanced by cost-efficiency. Our teams will:

- Conduct an extensive pre-flight review to sift duplicate, unsigned or partially signed documents
- Sanitize the data and apply standardization protocols
- Design a sophisticated, practical abstraction and testing procedure
